

The King and Parliament;

Or the Destruction of

ARGILE,

A SONG.

To the Tune of King James's Jigg.

I.

For Tories now's the time to sing,
And out of the Ashes great Souls to bring;
Whose honours long in the Dust have ly'n
Under the Oppression of Whiggish Whine;
The Dog-Starrs do now decline,
And bright Phabus begins to shine,
Insects of Corruption he doth refine,
The King and the Parliament now doth joyn.

II.

The greatest Monarch in Europe is Crown'd,
And hath called a Parliament Loyal and sound.
The Bill of Exclusion is quite forgot,
And sent to the Devil with Oats's Plot;
Argile we fear not, with mixed Crew,
Of French and Dutch, the Whig and the Jew,
Since we have a Parliament Loyal and True,
We'll pray for the King and the Parliament too.

III.

The Scotch Parliament Loyal and brave,
Exposes their Fortunes the Kingdom to save;
Our English in Emulation agree,
We'll beat down the Rebels from hence to Dundee:
Millions of Loyallists lys aside,
Who waits occasion to be employ'd,
Whose service hath formerly been deny'd,
Now hopes against Rebels they may be try'd.

IV.

Methinks I hear 'em cry Fire for James,
He Fought for his Subjects in all extreams:
Hark, hark, the Cannons goes thump, thump, thump,
Brave Boys fall on 'em, they stink of the Rump;
Keep the Wind; secure the Plain,
Wheel about, and charge again;
We'll Fight for King James through Fire and Flame
All you cannot kill, drive 'em into the Main.

V.

Argile shall know, that Jamy's the King,
Protected by Angels, and Forces can bring,
To make him feel the Dint of his Sword,
More biting than his empty Name of a Lord;
Let Argile, Monmouth, Lobb, and Gray,
Darvers and Charlton Curse the day,
And the rest of the Rebels each other betray
And all Bastard pretentions cut off in the Fray.

VI.

Our King and two Parliaments all agreed,
We'll clear the Coast from the Thames to the Tweed;
The States of all Loyal Subjects shall lie,
For Men and for Moneys the King to supply:
Let Cesar speak his mind from the Throne,
Our Lives and fortunes are all his own,
His just Resolutions formerly known,
Is now in full splendor protecting the Crown.